If, as the staff insists, the word "non-conforming" has no future adverse implication for shoreline residential structures, why in the face of such ferocious public opposition does the staff insist on using it? Makes no sense unless (a) the staff is politically deaf; or, (b) the word is in fact intended to imply future removal of these homes.

Please resist verbal tricks that disadvantage shoreline homeowners compared to everybody else. Tell us what you want us to do and we'll do it, but don't put a time bomb under our homes.
